339th Cobra flight, 349th PIC, 6 landings

I have been out of the air for a couple weeks because of some medical problems and it being crunch time at work. Had to miss the NM-RAC Negrio Fly-in last week and 10/10/10 fly-in at Marble Canyon this weekend.

As a consolation and birthday present to myself (yesterday), I went up for a short flight today. No plans and no goals except to have a good flight.

Belen Takeoff: 10:00am Belen Landing: 11:36pm

Today's Airtime 1.6

Total PIC Time: 898.2 Total Logged Time: 919.4

I made two touch and goes, then left the pattern and headed south to the stone labyrinth, to see if any improvements were made. There was a tent set up and some construction going on east of the heart maze.

I flew a little further south to check on the geodesic dome builder. A bigger dome was in the yard. I don't know if these two projects are done by the same person, but I suspect they are.

I flew out west towards the Valley of the Horses. On the way I flew over the pools.

It was a beautiful morning. I flew down the Valley, past the bump towards the Caldron.

I made a big circle below the rim of the Caldron, then flew out the deep canyon at the "Jaws of Death."

It felt great to get back in the air again. Happy birthday Jeff.

Here is my GPS tracklog of this flight.
